

Struggling to stay awake during university management meetings? Is the fuzzy management speak dumbing you down? Let University Management Bingo keep you sharp!

How to play University Management Bingo:

1. Every time you hear one of the words on this card in a university meeting, you should cross it off. You can only cross off words once. Conjunctions and combinations, such as “perform-ance” or “top-sector”, also count as a hit. Hence the game requires attention, which will keep you alert.
2. As you cross off the last word on your card, you immediately shout “BINGO!” at the top of your voice. The game also requires enthusiasm and some nerve.
3. Be prepared to explain your behaviour to others. University Management Bingo is a social game.
4. Tally the number of meetings it took to complete your card. Empathically compare scores with colleagues. If you can score all terms in one meeting, you get “Double University Management Bingo!” (“DUMBO!”) and have earned our deeply felt compassion.
5. If somebody claims “there is no alternative” in response to the game, you score a BONUS POINT. You can subtract this from your meeting tally below.
